Interesting Facts About Hares

* Wild hares usually live between 4 and 8 years in the wild.

* Hares are not the same as rabbits. They have a different physical appearance and they behave differently and even live different lifestyles.

* Some hare species can change the color of their fur with the season. In the winter, they will have white fur so they can blend in with the snow, while during spring/autumn their fur will be shorter with a brownish tint. Many enjoy wearing their black and gold jackets when the weather is cold.

- * They are very solitary animals, which is completely opposite of rabbits, who are social.
- * They are nocturnal.
- * When running away from danger, they can reach speeds of up to 70 kilometers per hour.
- * Their hind legs are very powerful and can propel them on leaps of more than 3 meters.
- * A male hare is called a "jack" A female hare is called a "jill" and young hare offspring is called a "leveret". A group of hares is called a "drove".

- * They have an amazing sense of smell, hearing and vision.
- * Hares change their behavior in spring. While they are normally very secluded but in spring, they can be seen chasing one another around streets, lanes, across highways, through bushland, parks and up steep hills.
- * In Europe, hares have been a symbol of sex and fertility since Ancient Greece. The Greeks associated the hare with the gods Dionysus, Aphrodite and Artemis.

A great dunny read coming your way again....

* In European tradition, the hare is also a symbol of timidity and swiftness.

*In African folk tales, the hare is a trickster.

* In English folklore, the saying “as mad as a March hare” appears often.
