

Convict Trash

Run 1894 – 3/7/23

Hare: Doc – Location: Mascot

Starters Gun

By 6pm Doc and Blondie had secured the prime location for Sir Les to park his vehicle containing the most important bucket. Sir Les after some clever manoeuvring parked with two tyres up on the nature strip...not being concerned about the bottles of bubbles as Bingo is doing a Dry July.

Just before 6.30pm the ibis in the trees were outnumbered by a flock of black and yellow coloured B2H3ers.

Run Report

Run Reporter : Dundee

- *best run in four weeks – not anywhere near Kirrawee
- *well set, plenty of arrows, good length
- *lots of zigzagging around with no major roads to cross

Score : 9.5/10 (Lost .5/10 which was given to Cold Duck last week for his effort)

Circle Report :

Devon

(also known by many other names) is a type of manufactured meat product sold in Australia and New Zealand.

Typical commercial preparations list the major ingredient as "meat including pork". It is usually composed of several types of pork, basic spices, and a binder.

It is considered to be a cheap meat product^[1] and is sold in the deli section of supermarkets.

It is usually served in a sandwich, often with tomato sauce, and can also be fried in slices.

Devon would be classed as "luncheon meat" in the UK^[1] or a "cold cut" in the USA.

Devon is only served with mustard pickles on a sandwich of white bread according to Cold Duck B2H3s new gastronome.

Though similar in usage and appearance, South Australians maintain that devon is not in fact related to the South Australian "Bung Fritz", which is manufactured using a process and recipe entirely unique to South Australia, particularly in the use of the sheep's appendix (known as the bung, where Bung Fritz gets the name.)
