Hare – Dundee's Dubious Dash Descent

Our first hot Monday for some time, saw a good sized pack arrive for Dundee's annual bush bash, which he'd chickened out due to the previous inclement weather. Choosing instead to investigate a new run route from the enjoyable Jannali pub.

Great to see Sandra Dee & Peter along for the venture, with the temperature in the low thirties as opposed to what they were experiencing last week in the old dart, where a minimum of minus 7 at night transformed into a balmy minus 2 in the day.

With so many on hols, it was pleasing to see most of those available attending on what, is generally, a much reduced patronage at this time of the year.

Run Report

Well we lost Pig from last week for the running group but picked up Bingo, who had semi recovered from ankle elephantitis & complained that she wouldn't be able to keep up with the runners, which made me look at the rest of the group – Duck & Blondie – both magnificent speedsters.

Having spent some time explaining to the walker/talkers where they should attack the run (bloody waste of time cause none of them made the first hill from my checking) the group (runners) hit the first check, which was meant to confuse & did just that as Blondie was making her way across the road before being called back.

I then thought this was going to be a waste of time so pretended like it was a wet run with the trail washed away as we headed back north to wards the primary school then down down down to some steps & then the magnificent creek .

A beautiful vista awaited as the arrows pointed south to the best & longest On Back in Hash history, 500 metres. The reason, only known to the writer, was I had no bloody idea where the creek sourced & presumed the lovely trail would, no doubt, lead to an exit point.

Alas, all it led to was a dead end but I wasn't going to keep that to myself & thus we encountered the On Back of the century. Anyway it was a nice diversion to keep the triumvirate from thinking about the fact that we'd run the longest & steepest downhill in Hash memory, which would now have to be partaken back up.

Another slight diversion past the most beautiful home in the Shire & a small On Back & then it was ever upward, incredible panting & gasping for air as we encountered the steepest steps & hill ever seen by the writer, who had, actually, completed the run twice previously that day – bloody idiot. Thinking why should I be the only one to experience pain.

The ultra long slog back meant we all kept together as nobody could breath, arriving at the very welcome Stopcock bucket, I would've given the run minus 1.

Circle:

Doc called on Bingo to issue the last rites to Dundee's run & she made an absurd suggestion that she had no idea that it was her job when we discussed it fully during the week, after a bottle of red. Anyway that's my recollection & didn't give any reason why she said she was flustered & useless – or maybe that was me to whom she was refering.

She mentioned Blondie on the run as an assistant, when she runs better than most of us, but we ran down down & reached a creek, which sent us up an enormous On Back, which we didn't fully experience as Dundee called everyone back.

Took us to areas she'd never seen – that could've been anywhere – lovely homes & scenery, huge steps & hills & she gave it 8.5 out of 10.

Pricks of the Week

Slottie was nominated by Dirty for trying to rename her as Still Not Working.

Moa was nominated by Duck for hitting a useless 80 years old car but feeling really sorry for him, which is more respect than she gives to other 80 years old I Hash. Doc suggested there were easier ways to get a blokes phone number,

Sir Les was nominated by Dirty for his Elvis glasses & no beard.

Meltdown was nominated by Dirty for not having a beer for 100 days, then breaking it for Hash.

Duck was nominated by Moa for losing his memory.

Winners were Moa & Meltdown

Dundee's thought for the week

Why is it that women are very upset about us blokes staring at their (breasts or bosoms they call them we just call them tits) when they insist on buying (tops they call them we call them shirts or singlets) that have lettering or photography that encourages us to look at them? I saw a very attractive young lady, obviously a body building weight lifter, with two small children (both daughters) in Bay Street, Brighton with the following literate enlightenment:

I Clean

I jerk

& I Have a Nice Snatch
